St. John’s University M.A. Liberal Studies
Ambitious and intellectually curious students who seek an interdisciplinary approach to graduate study are encouraged to consider the Master of Arts program in Liberal Studies at St. John’s University. The program offers four tracks—humanities, social science, cultural studies, and innovative research—that allow you to tailor the curriculum to your unique career goals.

Within each track, students choose a concentration to further specialize their programs of study and complement this in-depth curriculum with integrative courses from other disciplines. The combination of tracks and concentrations allows you to gain a thorough and comprehensive graduate education in the program.

The M.A. in Liberal Studies will prepare you for a wide range of professional goals, as well as for competitive doctoral programs. Graduates of the program find opportunities in a variety of career fields, including higher education, finance, communications, and public service. Opportunities are not limited to these fields; the research, communication, and critical thinking skills you’ll acquire are sought in all professional and academic pursuits.
