ST. JOHN'S
UNIVERSITY

St. John's University M.A. Government and Politics

The 33-credit Master of Arts in Government and Politics prepares students for leadership positions with a global focus. The program offers both a thesis and non-thesis track in concentrations of American government, international relations, comparative government, political theory, and public policy and administration. Students can also complete the international relations concentration on the Rome, Italy, campus.

Graduates holding a master's degree in government and politics are well-suited to a wide variety of career opportunities in the civil or foreign services; in the public or private sectors in positions of political or administrative responsibility; in the field of education; or in further study as doctoral or law students.

Recent alumni have secured positions as legislative aides, lobbyists, research analysts, political journalists, and campaign staffers. They have also found employment in federal agencies, the US Senate, the CIA, nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), major corporations, and media conglomerates.
