3C) Are we together in this? Moments of meaningful interactions in Music Therapy

Alexandra Georgaki, Music Therapist (UK)

This paper will focus upon an inquiry into different types of shared history created between therapist and child. The presentation will include extracts from music therapy sessions as the central point for an exploration into the development of moment of meaningful interactions in improvisational music therapy with young children with autism.

Alexandra Georgaki studied Education and Music before qualifying as a music therapist in 2005. She has worked in the fields of autism, learning difficulties and neurology.
