You are invited to exhibit at the Palliative Care Conference that will take place at Molloy College in Rockville Centre on June 9, 2017. Molloy College, in collaboration a network of community partners, is pleased to be bringing this ground-breaking conference to Long Island.

This conference will provide an opportunity for health and human services professionals from a variety of settings to explore the key principles of palliative care and their application in multi-professional work settings. It will enable attendees to develop greater confidence in the practice of their palliative care skills within their own clinical areas, and in multi-professional teams. We are expecting to have over 400 people, including: Nurses, Doctors, Social workers, Clergy, Psychiatrists, Physical, Recreational and Occupational Therapists, Dietitians, EMTs, Students and Volunteers in attendance.

The fee to exhibit is $500 ($400 non-profit) for the day, from 8:30 a.m. – Noon. However, space is limited, so only 12 exhibitors will be able to attend. Exhibitors will be provided with a 6 ft. table and one conference admission (additional admission: $50 each). The exhibit tables will be in the Madison Theater lobby in the Public Square (where the breakfast, the Opening Session, the morning break, lunch and many of the concurrent sessions will be held).

Please fill out the Sponsor/Exhibitor form and return it to me by May 5, 2017 if you are interested in exhibiting at the conference. You will be billed for the $500 ($400 non-profit) fee. I look forward to your participation and support.
