

Fr. James Martin, S.J. The Rev. James Martin, S.J., is a Jesuit priest, author and editor at large at America, The National Catholic Review. He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Business in 1982, where he received his bachelor's degree in economics (B.S. Econ.) with a concentration in finance. In 1995, Martin began his graduate theology studies at the Weston Jesuit School of Theology (now Boston College School of Theology and Ministry), in Cambridge, Mass., where he received his master's degree in divinity (M.Div.) in 1998, and his master's in theology (Th.M.) in 1999. While in Cambridge, he worked as a chaplain at a Boston prison. After completing his Jesuit studies, he was ordained a Catholic priest in June 1999 in Chestnut Hill, Ma. On Nov. 1, 2009, he pronounced his final vows as a "fully professed" Jesuit in New York City.

Besides being a frequent lecturer and retreat director, Father Martin is the author of several books, including the New York Times bestsellers Jesus: A Pilgrimage and The Jesuit Guide to Almost Everything, as well as his two most recent books Seven Last Words and a novel The Abbey. He is also the author of countless articles in Catholic publications like America, Commonweal, U.S. Catholic and The (London) Tablet and has also written for, among other places, The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal and The Boston Globe. He has commented on religion and spirituality in the national and international media, and he has appeared on all the major radio and television networks. On Sundays he assists at the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola in New York City. He lives in America House Jesuit community in New York.