Dear Residents,

I hope that this message finds you healthy and well. I wanted to send along a reach out on behalf of the Residence Life Team and check in with each of you to see how you are managing in this time of transition. We recognize that the past few weeks have been challenging and I want to thank you all for your continued patience as we navigate this COVID-19 pandemic together. As I am writing this, I am struck by the word “together;” although we are no longer together in the traditional sense of living on campus in a Residence Hall or sitting together in front of Public Square or the Anselma Room, we are together as a Molloy community and continue to support each other through this.

As the group of students that I had the pleasure to work closely with during my first full year at Molloy, you all have taught me not only what it means to be a part of the Molloy community, but also what makes Molloy so special. The conversations, questions, feedback, ideas, and celebrations have all added to my experience and I am thankful. I already miss seeing you all across campus, hearing the great things that you are doing in the world and being a part of your journey as you grow and learn.

One of our taglines this year has been the idea that when you live on campus, you “live where you learn.” As we transition deeper into this reality together of learning virtually, I want to assure you that the Residence Life Team will continue to be there to support each of you and maintain the same level of service and commitment to your success. You all chose to live on campus for many different reasons, and one of our goals is to not lose sight of that. The sense of community and support that we can give each other will not change.

In the coming weeks, Residence Life will continue to host conversations, programs and opportunities using technology, social media, and other avenues to stay connected and maintain the momentum that we have been able to create this year. We welcome your questions and feedback, as this is part of our commitment to you. We also encourage you to stay connected with the many offices and resources in Student Affairs, because there are some great things in store.

As I close this message, I write to you all together as a group, the Molloy College residential community, with gratitude and optimism for the future. The Residence Life Team and I wish you all continued success for the future with health and safety for you and your families. If we can be of assistance to you, please do not hesitate to contact us at 516-323-3463 or residencelife@molloy.edu.
