Andrei Matorin (violin)

Andrei Matorin has performed and recorded with world-renowned musicians including Rosa Passos, Claudio Roditi, Tiger Okoshi, Nilson Matta, Oscar Stagnaro, and Christian Scott, among others. Beginning his violin studies at the age of six, this contemporary virtuoso spent his early years studying classical technique in Italy and Switzerland, before moving to the United States and committing himself to jazz. In 2003 Matorin became the first violinist to graduate from the jazz program at the New England Conservatory's Preparatory School and that same year was awarded a scholarship to Berklee College of Music, where he went on to receive two Achievement Awards. Matorin's Opus was rereleased in 2013 following rave reviews including Editor's Picks from DownBeat. He is currently collaborating with Paquito D'Rivera on his Charlie Parker with Strings project produced by The Lincoln Center.